

Citation 2

being sued by a Californian as a large percentage of travelers in the Phoenix airport are likely going to or through the golden state. So while the personal jurisdiction case would likely fail under the limited construction of “minimum contacts” found in Pennoyer v. Neff, Van could be subject to IPJ under modern interpretations of the rule.

Citing wrong case is not impressive.