

Deep Sea

According to this definition of what falls under intellectual property, and since civil actions concerning copyrights clearly fall under federal law, this establishes subject matter jurisdiction through federal question. If (deep sea diving) Al and Anna's claim had been against Cindy, this issue would have been one of assignment and transfer of copyright title instead of infringement. Such cases do not arise under federal law but are instead state matters. However since this is not the case, the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York may properly claim subject matter jurisdiction over Al and Anna's intentional infringement of intellectual property rights claim against Bob.
(From an "A" paper)